Tries To Force Them To March With Civilians In Liberty Day Parade. Men Refuse To Accept Position And Send Regrets To General Wood.

(Special to the Argus.)
St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 15.—The colored former soldiers and the colored march in the Liberty Day parade in St. Joseph, Mo., on Monday morning. The march was a result of the refusal of Col. J. C. MacDonald, marshal, of the parade, to permit them to march after the white former soldiers were instead to march in the parade. The march of former war men, the R. O. T. C.

The event was in honor of General Wood and the committee advised the colored marchers to march in the parade. The committee also advised the colored marchers to march in the parade. The committee also advised the colored marchers to march in the parade.

The St. Joseph Gazette (daily) in an editorial had the following to say of the affair, which it headed "An Unfortunate Mistake":
"The committee having charge the Victory Parade made an unfortunate mistake in its decision in subordinating the Negro soldiers to drill in the parade. The Negro soldiers are just as much a portion of the United States as the white soldiers. The St. Joseph colored troops did not ask to be in the parade. They were called to the parade. They were called to the parade. They were called to the parade."

Entertains Small Audience At Coliseum With Weird Expositions of Illogic and Contradiction of Statements.

About three hundred, mostly women, gathered at the Coliseum on Monday night to hear the address of Rev. M. M. Madison of Oklahoma, who had been advertised that he would tell the people of St. Louis all about his scheme in colonizing the Negro race in Africa.

At 8:30 William Campbell introduced the speaker as the "greatest orator of our Race—our leader." With the characteristic of a man of the speaker, who was a former soldier, he launched into his address. He denounced the war, and he denounced the war. He denounced the war.

"Dear Sirs," the underdog speaker began, "I am a colored man, and I am a colored man. I am a colored man, and I am a colored man. I am a colored man, and I am a colored man."

"I am a colored man, and I am a colored man. I am a colored man, and I am a colored man. I am a colored man, and I am a colored man."
